Educational Technology Summit 2016- Design, Technology and Change

Over the last few months, Sanskriti School and Sarvodaya Vidyalaya, Malcha Marg, have partnered under Project OR (Open Resources) for the EdTech summit held by the LearnToday Group. Sanskriti's goal is to give the students of Sarvodaya Vidyalaya access to academic and extracurricular resources using videos conceived and created by Sanskritians; and based on the interests of the students of Sarvodaya Vidyalaya. Sanskritians have created projectors from cardboard boxes and magnifying glasses for students to watch videos together in a classroom setting.

Sarvodaya Vidyalaya's idea revolves around introducing a series of motivational speeches by teachers in assemblies, mirroring a practice that occurs daily in their school. They feel this would encourage students at Sanskriti; and provide teachers an avenue to express their opinions on various matters. Under Project OR, the team from Sanskriti has created a website and an app, where videos of speeches and curricular and co-curricular material can be uploaded and viewed.

The summit was held on 22nd October at the Vasant Valley School, where 20 schools were invited from across the country to display their projects in the form of a four-minute video. It was a great experience of sharing ideas and giving each other feedback. The summit also included interesting workshops for the participants about 3-D design software, Lego Mindstorms and even Archaeology. It was a very well planned and executed event where the innovative ideas of the brightest minds were discussed and appreciated. Sanskriti School's video can be accessed at: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=friOez3P0yo>

The Project OR team had a wonderful experience implementing the project and look forward to making Project OR even bigger.
