Psychology	Assignment 1 of 2: I-discovery

Change is often said, is the only constant. This is certainly true for human beings. Think about the many ways in which you have changed over the course of your life. Some of these changes are very obvious and others are less apparent. To study all these changes, collect your photographs from infancy to adolescence. Interview your parents/guardians regarding your behaviour, physical development ( like when you started walking etc.), language development ( like when you spoke first words etc), social development ( like how and when you made friends etc), emotional development ( how you expressed and controlled your emotions etc), cognitive development (like when you started reasoning out, how you learnt etc ). Write about your personal views about these stages of life. You can write specific events, experiences or even verbatim or whatever your parents tell you. After the adolescence stage, collect pictures of others (parents or any other) for other stages and interview them regarding the kind of changes they have gone through and the kind of challenges they face in everyday life.

Life stages :

- Infancy birth to 18 months
- Early childhood 18 months to 6 years
- Middle childhood 6 yrs to 12 yrs
- Adolescence 12 yrs to 20 yrs
- Young adulthood 20 yrs to 45 yrs
- Middle adulthood 45 yrs to 60 yrs
- Late adulthood 60 yrs to death

Submission Details: Handwritten submission + Please include pictures + Minimum 10 pages

Assignment 2 of 2: Individual Presentation on Psychological Phenomenon

You can choose any topic from psychology that fascinates you, gather information in an organised manner and present it to the class once you come back in your own unique style (powerpoint presentation, Prezi, game, activity, demonstration, role play etc). This should also include recent research done in that particular area.

Only Limit: Project Topic has to be approved by your teacher. Total presentation time is 5+1 min.
