

Educational Excursion to Delhi Haat- Class 11

Dilli Haat is an exhibit of individualistic products from across India, that are unique to their respective states, which is an illustration of the advancement of internal trade of our country. Saris from Varanasi are being worn by women residing in Delhi, such is the magnanimous effect of trade and globalization. It is important for kids to understand as we prepare to enter the world of business and commerce, how trade is conducted at the grass-root level, by observing and experiencing it first-hand. We started off with a visit to the APJ Abdul Kalam Memorial followed by an address by the representative from the market who spoke to us about the history of the market and how it came into existence. The students received a chance to engage in conversation with these artisans who earn a livelihood out of producing and marketing of goods that form the basis of Indian Economy.
