

From James Augustus's 'Bengal Gazette' to The Franklin, and now The Voyager.

The word 'voyager' has Latin roots, derived from 'viaticum', meaning journey. The name of this newspaper reflects this journey undertaken by each student, not only when they step into school for the first time (and then for the next 12 years of their lives) but also each time they dare to take a leap of faith, to take the road not taken, or to step into the unknown. The Editorial Board decided to take a similar leap of faith when we decided to tackle the mammoth task of starting our school newspaper. Sanskriti's flourishing student body has creativity and expression running through every single classroom. It is home to bright young minds creating, innovating and exploring, steadily making their voyage through the sea of life, conquering the monsters and storms they face with the same determination they'd fight for a FruitChill with. It is this determination we hope you channel into your submissions for the newspaper (submissions open soon!)

The Editorial Board is proud to present The Voyager, the first issue of Sanskriti School's monthly newspaper.
